CASE STUDY

TRW Systems

"The comments we've had from people coming onsite from other plants across the globe have been brilliant."

John Cartney at TRW Systems loves the impression that InVentry gives to TRW's visitors, but it's not just visitors that are impressed by the system, others across the global business love it too:

"We've had a lot of compliments from other branches across the globe - they've never seen anything like it before".

TRW Systems had outgrown their old-fashioned reception area which left them turning to solutions that would increase their efficiency. They had a constantly manned reception before taking the decision to go down a more virtual route.

"We wanted to go virtual with our reception and obviously InVentry played a big part in that for visitors signing in. It's modern, it's better technology, you get away from the old-school reception style. If you want to go the virtual route then InVentry is the perfect solution."

There were several aspects of the InVentry system that helped TRW go virtual:

“Visitors sign in and the system prints a badge, it’s just so easy. When people sign in, staff receive a text or email notification to say that their visitor is waiting for them in reception. The system also takes an image of the visitor when they sign in and that comes through with the notification, so we can actually see who’s in reception!”

TRW have also used InVentry with their staff to complement their existing health and safety procedures:

“You get a data trail on who has signed in which is time and date stamped. We can clearly see who is onsite at any time, which is useful in the case of an emergency and we have to do a fire roll call.”

“We’ve also added our health and safety policy to the system so when a visitor comes to sign in they’ve got to read through the policy and agree to the terms – it’s a pretty slick experience all round.”
